

Please leave the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law alone. Since its implementation we have noticed a signifigant drop in the number of annoying telemarketer calls. If anything we would encourage more legislation against such calls rather than less. Our home time is better without the unwanted phone calls. The telephone is a way of entering our home and is not a privilege which should be granted to anyone for any purpose.
Please continue the practice of protecting our private space and time and keep the telephone privacy law as it stands.

Sincerely,
Andrew Schrader
